

BIO - Dr. Allen Farina

Dr. Allen Farina has earned university degrees in Sociology, Education, and Educational Leadership. He is a university instructor on faculty at three academic institutions, where his work has centered in leadership training, development, accountability, and management of change - with interests in multiculturalism, inclusion, and data-driven leadership practices...

As for Islamic schools, he has taught grade school, middle school, and high school students. He keeps his role in Islamic schools limited to the realm of teacher leadership, after having served as a lead teacher, as an assistant to a principal when first opening a school, and as director of an after-school program.

Dr. Farina teaches at

Ottawa University

Graduate courses in the College of Education include

- Philosophy, Accountability, and Change
- Leadership and the Management of Change
- Data Driven Leadership Practices
- Human Relations for Leaders in Diverse Communities

Undergraduate courses in the College of Arts and Sciences include

- Ethnic Relations and Multiculturalism
- Introduction to Sociology.

Waldorf University

Graduate level classes in the College of Education include

- Student-Centered Differentiated Learning
- Instructional Strategies
- Ethical Leadership
- Diversity and Inclusion in the Organizational Culture
- Organizational Development.

Harrison College in the School of Social Science

- Psychology